Doheny on Oil Celebrate Dante, Napoleon Cannibals and Trap Gun Yes, It's Dreadful, But—

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

Don't gamble in oil stocks, BIG OR LITTLE. Don't GAMBLE in anything. But don't be too fooled by stories that come from Mexico about "oil uncorking out," or "oil wells producing salt water instead of oil," etc. somebody interested in oil lands in other places, or interested in buying things cheap in Mexico, has carried on a systematic campaign of deception in regard to Mexican conditions. E. L. Doheny is the authority for this statement, and he knows something about Mexican oil.

Napoleon died, caged on the Island of St. Helena, one hundred years ago tomorrow. On the 14th of next September comes the 600th anniversary of Dante's death.

"Celebrate" the death of Napoleon, praying that the world may not see another Bonaparte, that men of his type may go permanently to join the Dinosaur.

Notice the difference between a really great man and the imitation. Bonaparte has been dead one hundred years, and old men in England even now shiver when they hear his name. It was great news for Europe when the short, fat, prematurely old world conqueror was officially DEAD.

Another that dreamed of world conquest now lives in Holland. Nobody bothers about him, or cares how long the former Kaiser lives. England having decided that she doesn't want to hang the cousin of her own king.

"Celebrate" Dante's death and service to the world by reading some time before next September the last part of the Divine Comedy—the description of Paradise. Everybody reads a little of the "Hell" with the lolling pitch and lurches on the attractive pictures with which various illustrated editions of Dante's are disfigured. The real power of Dante is shown in the "Paradise." Not one in a thousand reads it, or the second and better part of Goethe's "Faust."

Not "deep in our hearts," only half way down, we are still all interested in killing, for we are near the killing days. When you read that Esquimaux, suffering lack of food and lack of game, are eating each other, that interests you. You don't have to go down far in the dark "bark" that covers the brain, just under the skull, to reach the days when all of us were cannibals.

You are interested, want details, and ask to see a diagram, when you read that the Archbishop of Zanzibar, big moving picture man, arranged at the door of the Zanzibar cellar an automatic gun that shot a bridge at death when he "pinioned the door."

People that become cannibals suddenly find traps that work efficiently and kill—those interest us considerably more than Mr. Einstein's "Relativity."

A distinguished official is horrified because he hears so great and terrible is the power of the walking delegate that such a man can go into a shop, blow his whistle and cause the work to cease." It is terrible, but after all, if any employer gets his head in the trap and says "you are all fired," then all work ceases. If the head of the shop can DO every body out, why can't the head of the union CALL everybody out?

No matter what else you forget, in considering foreign matters remember that the English are EFFICIENT.

Hence they don't much of the earth, manage to keep it, much out and get more. For instance:

George Harvey sailed yesterday for England as ambassador. The night before somebody gave him a magnificent farewell, fine dinner, fine flowers, fine speeches, fine everything. Who do you suppose gave that dinner?

It was not an American or an American corporation, or bank, or labor union. It was the good, old Cunard Steamship Company, that carries the British flag back and forth across the ocean without losing a passenger.

Nothing will influence Colonel Harvey. It must be said of him, as was said of the late Gladstone, that his heart is "ever with the weak and miserable poor."

He may wear court dress and cocked hat in England, even knee breeches and silk stockings, but he will always have in mind somebody in America in overalls covered with grease, or tagging behind a plow.

But that dinner proves British efficiency. They entertain EVERYBODY and don't miss the right man. On Harvey's Bill Arthur was wasted. But England can afford the loss. At least, when he left this country the last thing in his hand was a British napkin; the last solid meal for several days was British.

A brilliant young "honor man" the other day committed suicide—overstrain. Next day a girl at Smith College killed herself—she had failed to take honors—grieved, put a rope around her neck, left a letter saying she was sorry to disgrace her family. It is stupid to drive a brilliant child, thus wearing out a splendid machine; equally stupid to drive what seems a dull child, spoiling that child's chance.

Ship Owners Dispute Union Men's Statements That 10 Craft Are Tied Up Here

Both sides in the marine strike today claimed local victories.

At the office of the Marine Engineers' Union, on Broad street, a list of ten ships alleged to be tied up in Boston as a result of the strike was displayed.

Union officials say these ships are unable to move unless some agreement is reached.

The ships are the Nawaso Liner West Totus, bound for Pacific coast ports; tanker Americo, for Porto Rico; steamer Cities Service City of Columbus, for Savannah; the Clyde liner Lake Alexander, for Charleston and Jacksonville, and schooners Chesebrough and Everett.

The shipping men claim there is no ship tied up by the strike, but that Everett, Tyler said the West Totus has not yet discharged cargo and that the Americo is undergoing repairs and has a full crew already. They say the City of Columbus is not scheduled to sail until Saturday and the Lake Elsmere on Friday.

It was admitted by ship officials that the largest part of the crew of

U. S. SURE PANAMA WILL YIELD IN LAND DISPUTE

Washington, May 4.—Though four months' warships are within a few hours steaming distance of either coast of Panama, ready for any emergency, State Department officials are confident the Panama-Costa Rican boundary dispute will be brought to a satisfactory adjustment without the intervention of American military forces. The favorable reaction has resulted throughout Latin America officials stated today, from the publication of the correspondences between the United States and Panama.

PAYROLL BANDIT IS ADJUDGED INSANE

Thomas Mahr, serving a ten to twelve-year sentence in the State Prison at Charlestown and the last of the ten men arrested in connection with the Everett payroll holdup in December, 1918, has been adjudged insane and transferred to the Hospital for Criminal Insane at Bridgewater. The Everett bandits held up, shot and robbed Paymaster Frank R. Brown of the General Electric Company in Everett on the morning of December 20, 1918, of a payroll of $12,739.67.

Sues Three Relatives for Theft of Wife's Love

Mrs. Thomas Kletcha of Pittsfield, whose husband, a State automobile inspector, is suing his wife's mother, sister and aunt, all of Stockbridge, for $10,000 each, alleging alienation of his wife's affections. Mrs. Kletcha, with her little daughter, Marguerite, is at present living with neighbors.

Pittsfield, May 4.—Thomas Kletcha, State automobile inspector here, has brought suit to the three Stockbridge women asking $10,000 for alleged alienation of his wife's affection.

The women he has named are his mother-in-law, Mrs. Annie H. Kinsella, a sister-in-law, Miss Mabel Kinsella, and his wife's aunt, Mrs. John Lynch.

Mrs. Kinsella, an elderly woman, refuses to discuss the suit. "I don't see why I have been named in this tangled family affair," is all she will say.

It is known that Kletcha and his wife have been at odds for some time and she is at present living with neighbors. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Monaghan, on Dodge street, with her little daughter, Marguerite.

Mrs. Kletcha today refused to make any comment upon his suit other than to say that she has not and will not employ an attorney.

"I must consider first of all, the welfare of my daughter," she explained.

The Kletchas were married in New Haven, December 31, 1913, while the husband was employed as the chauffeur of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Mellen.

Friends of the couple today declared their belief that the trouble would blow over and that the pair would be united once more through their love for the child, Marguerite.

CAP IS CLEW TO CALIFORNIA SLAYING

San Diego, Cal., May 4.—A cap, stained with oil is the only clew the police have today to the identity of the slayer of an unidentified man whose body was found near an oil well casing. The cap was discovered at the bottom of the well, together with three pistol shells similar to an exploded one found near the body.

SOLONS TOLD TO OPPOSE VETS

Members of the legislative committee on Reconstruction in 191 were warned against granting any of the demands for legislation made by the American Legion, according to testimony before the Elevated Investigating Committee today by Representative Benjamin C. Lane of West Roxbury.

Lane, in response to questions from Special Counsel Taft of the committee, as to whether he knew of any "undue influence" being brought upon legislators in connection with the passage of street railway legislation, said:

"I was given to understand that members who voted against the Cambridge subway purchase bill would not fare as well in committee assignments as those who voted for the bill.

$30,000 SHORT, BANK TREASURER KILLS SELF

Moorestown, N. J., May 4.—Joseph Kaighn, president of the Moorestown Trust Company and a lawyer with offices in Camden, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a shotgun in his garage in the rear of his home here. According to William E. Tuttle, Jr., State bank commissioner, Mr. Kaighn killed himself because he was short $30,000 in his accounts at the bank.

DETROIT MAN INHERITS TITLE AND MILLION

Detroit, May 4.—Francis B. Curtis, head of the foundry planning department of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, left today for England to assume the title of Baron Courtney, take a seat in the House of Lords and receive an estate valued at $1,250,000. He inherited the title and the money through an uncle.

MRS. QUITT DEMANDS INQUIRY

Says Governor Should Get Curtis to Act in Case of Steinhouser

"If Louis was the victim of a premeditated murder," said Mrs. Lora Quitt, whose husband was fatally wounded by Patrolman Peter Steinhouser on Court square Saturday, at her home at No. 11 Kilsyth road, Medford, today.

Mrs. Quitt was in bed in delicate health for several years, is on the verge of collapse.

"Governor Cox should instruct Police Commissioner Curtis to put an end to these promiscuous shootings on innocent and defenseless persons on the public streets," said Mrs. Quitt. "Not by our mothers will become widows and small children fatherless.

"These men should be informed that they are not now on battlefields, but are only in a civilized community."

DID NOT RESIST ARREST.

Quitt on his death bed informed his wife and members of his family at the Faxmarket Square Relief Hospital that he did not resist arrest, nor did he put up a struggle with the officer.

Attorney Robert W. Nason, who has acted as counsel for police officers in the lower courts in several cases, called at police headquarters today and, with Inspector James A. Hennessey of the homicide department of the bureau of criminal investigation, went before Police Commissioner Curtis. After a conference they departed and it was noised about headquarters that their call had to do with the shooting of Quitt.

Inspector Hennessey, with Police Captain Armstrong of headquarters and Captain Kneeland of the City Hall avenue station, visited the Court house last night and, it is said, pre-

U. S. Is Getting More Than It Spends

Washington, May 4.—Although receipts from railroads have caused a heavy drain upon the treasury, the soundness of the public finances was revealed today in latest figures of the treasury showing ordinary receipts running far ahead of expenditures in the present financial year.

In the ten months of the fiscal year to May 1 total ordinary receipts have aggregated $4,451,000,000 and total ordinary disbursements $4,277,000,000.

During the ten months' period receipts dropped about $500,000,000 below last year. Total ordinary expenditures were cut from $5,822,000,000 to $4,277,000,000.

Ordinary receipts during the ten months came from three sources: Customs, $458,000,000; income and profits taxes, $2,352,000,000; miscellaneous internal revenue, $1,119,000,000; miscellaneous receipts, $913,000,000. Panama Canal tolls, etc., $10,529,000.

HIGH PRICES TO HOLD IN 1921

Pittsburgh, N. C., May 4—Complete stabilization of commodity prices may not be reached this year, the president for Summer retail trade is "fair to poor" and interest rates will remain much where they have been according to the countrywide survey, drawn up by John A. Logan, president of the American Business Association and submitted at today's session of that organization. Despite report was drawn after a voluminous amount of material from more than 1,000 merchants and manufacturers in business and finance throughout the country. The report shows business conditions as of April this year.

Other conclusions developed by the survey are:

The situation resulting from cancellation of contracts is very serious in industrial places, although less serious than in the Fall and Winter of 1920.

Commodity prices will not be less than 25 per cent. higher than in 1914.

The cost of living is greater than a year ago.

Retail business operations must appear as qualified by the statement that nothing spectacular will be very generally manifested unless costs are reduced.

IT'S JUST AS EASY TO PREPARE THEM Right

THERE'S all the taste-difference in the world in prunes when they're properly prepared. And it's just as easy to prepare them right. Perhaps you have a pet way of stewing prunes. But if you haven't [and even if you have] try this tested method:

First—soak them over night, if possible—but if not, for several hours at least. Second—cook them slowly until tender in the water in which they were soaked. Third—use plenty of water so the fruit will be "loose." Fourth—be sure you don't cook them too long as they will become too soft.

Flavor with an inch stick of cinnamon or some lemon or orange juice. Sugar is not required, as slow cooking brings out the rich fruit sugar in Sunsweet Prunes. If sugar is added, however, put it in after the prunes are cooked but while still hot so the sugar will dissolve.

Boiled prunes needn't be "spoiled" prunes—if you make them right. This recipe is worth reading, heeding—and saving!

Sunsweet is a mark of quality, not size. It represents the finest prunes California can produce, sun-sweetened and sun-cured. Large or small, the flavor of these top-quality prunes is the same. California Prune and Apricot Growers Inc., San Jose, California • 10,000 grower-members.

EVIDENCE HUNT IS REVEALED

Letters to Negro Sleuth Read to Support Wife's Conspiracy Charge

New York, May 4—Further evidence in support of the stand by Mrs. Helen Foster Stokes that Detective Sergeant Mark, W. E. D. Stokes' framed case against her was introduced at the trial of the latter's divorce suit here.

The evidence was contained in a packet of letters written by Stokes to J. P. Harbison, a negro detective of Chicago, employed by the millionaire's counsel, Samuel Untermyer, to obtain evidence against Mrs. Stokes. Harbison, it is charged, was employed by Stokes to frame a case against his wife. Harbison, it is charged, was to send a woman to Stokes' apartment at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, and then to arrive with a warrant for the woman's arrest. Stokes, it is charged, was to pay Harbison $1,000 for the job.

PIANO SALE

Liberty Bonds Taken in Trade Full Value Allowed

I am in the Piano business to save people money—not from purely philanthropic motives but because of the Cooperative value of the "Money Saving" idea—and believing that if the idea were projected into its possibilities it would eventually establish a business relation between my customers and my business that would be 100% mutuality. Upon that money saving idea I have since built up the largest business of its kind in New England. I am conducting the Piano business with the greatest regard for the people's side of the transaction—I know that every family will appreciate any saving that I may make in it in the buying of the piano and I use my business ability and my money to make that saving as big as possible—I am in close touch with the piano situation throughout America, every piano manufacturer in the country knows that I can pay spot cash for his pianos if he makes the price low enough for me to save a good sum for my customers—and there comes a time when these manufacturers need cash and they come to me for it. I never buy anything but the best pianos and only at a price that permits me to make a substantial saving for my customers. J. P. COLLINS.

DR. ROBLIN IS ACCUSED

Senator Carrick Promises Further Revelations When Universalist Fight Is Resumed

Sensational charges are expected to be made next Tuesday when the senate resumes debate on the bill to revoke the charter issued by the State to the Second Universalist Society in 1816.

It is claimed that additional evidence will be presented in connection with the allegation that the Rev. Dr. S. H. Roblin, the $6,000 pastor of the Second Universalist Church of Boston, obtained a leave of absence with pay last year to lecture in different parts of the country, receiving a salary of $6,000 for the time.

This charge was made by Senator Carrick in the senate on Tuesday, when a letter on Grosvenor Company stationery, signed by Dr. Roblin, and dated in addition to attend a meeting in Syracuse where the writer was to answer charges against the firm.

Senator Carrick moved to substitute for the bill a resolution ordering the attorney general to take such legal proceedings before the Supreme Court against the Second Universalist Society as is called for by the facts which has appeared in the senate during the past week. The resolution only one section a week on matters belonging to the Federal Treasury. It is supposed that all of the yearly income from the society's property, the Massachusetts Universalist Convention, and the association of the charter, does not go to the State.

Senator Carrick, a Republican, of Woodbridge, was acted as spokesman for the Democratic senators, declared he would present certain charges at next week's session. He declared that the charges had been in the hands of the committee before the publication of the letter, and that the committee had failed to take any action.

Ella Scampini of Worcester Fires in Breast When Offer to Wed Is Rejected

Worcester, May 4—Her petition to wed married, Ella Scampini, aged eighteen, of No. 4 Bonifant court, is reported to have drawn a revolver from her pocket and shot herself in the presence of her sweetheart, Angelo Gerardino, of the Scottish Rite Cemetery, who told the police was walking with the girl when Miss Scampini drew the weapon and fired the shot. Gerardino told the police that he had refused to marry the girl because he was not yet ready to support a wife, and that he had left her to go to work. Miss Scampini was taken to the City Hospital, where she is under treatment.

Motorists Expect No Drastic Fee Action

Motorists in general feel very well satisfied with the work of the Legislature to date upon measures affecting particularly their interests.

And, in view of previous performances, they are not expecting anything drastic in the matter of higher fees.

They believe that the Legislature will recognize the soundness of their contention that they are now paying for the maintenance of all the state highways, which are used by all sorts of traffic including trucks, and that no one class should be called upon to pay any part of road construction.

Colonial Picture Sets New Standard of Grandeur for Film Productions

By FREDERICK JOHNS

A new standard of grandeur and magnificence for film productions was set at the Colonial Theatre last night when Hugo Rosenfeld unfolded the Paramount masterpiece "Deception."

We have heard much of the de luxe New York productions where scenes are presented by gradeur, surroundings to the most artistic degree, reaching heights in the production of the Rivoli and Rialto and, for the first time, Boston has been privileged to witness something of the sort, when Hugo Rosenfeld brought his production to the Colonial Theatre.

When the curtain rises it revealed a wonderful stage picture. A stage orchestra in a sunken garden, and a many stages for the production of Tudor castles, armor, stained glass and other purveyors of the atmosphere of the days of Henry VIII.

To put the audience in the mood a brief film showing a scene of merry England was thrown on the screen. Then the orchestra played several selections, after which the curtain drawn aside.

HALF DOZEN SONGS.

The Hoyt is known in the film world as the artistic home of the picture, and the production of "Deception" is in keeping with the traditions of the house. Not only was the picture a beautiful one, but the singing was of the highest order. There were half a dozen songs, all of which were well rendered, and the orchestra played the accompaniments in a manner that was a delight to the ear.

Mme. Rosa Olitzka, the famous contralto of the Boston Opera Company, was the singer of Henry Hall's favorite ballads, and Jane Seymour, the heroine, and contributed two solos. Both were well received.

ENTHRALLING ROMANCE.

Costumes, scenery and pictures are combined to make the production an enthralling romance. If you can imagine a combination of the most beautiful scenes you have ever seen, and add to them the most delightful music you have ever heard, you will have some idea of the production.

Mme. Olitzka, in ensemble with the singers of Henry Hall surrounded Queen Catherine and Jane Seymour and contained the tragedy of Anne Boleyn.

After the first few scenes you are transported back beyond the centuries, and you feel that Twelfth Night or King Arthur's Round Table is in session.

One American scene, somewhere in the west, is also shown, and the appearance of modern times. These scenes, however, are not at all out of harmony with the rest of the production, and actually add to the interest.

JANNINGS AS HENRY.

There is the King, surrounded by all the splendor of royalty, and in the person of Emil Jannings we have the ruler of England to the life. Jannings not only renders a remarkable performance himself, but he is a master in bringing out human personality in those around him. He is a master in bringing out human personality in those around him.

History shows many added to King Henry's list of wives, but Jannings, Anne, Katherine of Aragon and Catherine Howard with a son of the Princess lost their and was certain that Henry would never have removed as Jannings makes him. That at least he was a man and a gentleman. It is possible that the King did make him a bit ill-tempered and irritable because the shadow of a doubt that he was a wife murderer, and if a man is a murderer what is his mother's mother.

The Ann Boleyn of Diana Hastes is another amazing performance. This woman is not beautiful, but she has mental gifts or powers of fascination to express and make irresistible her extraordinary appeal.

LONDON RE-CREATED.

The revels of King Henry and the tragedy of Queen Katherine and Queen Ann are supported by many scenic magnificence. London has been called London Town, but never has it with thousands in the streets of the Tudors. None of the accessories and the [illegible] of the many American attempts to rebuild the past are visible here. The coronation scene is a marvel of beauty.

GERMAN MARKS

About a year ago Marks rose from one cent to three cents in ten weeks. Buyers at the low point could have sold and made three dollars for one.

The rise was temporary, but we believe we are now right on the verge of another tremendous advance, and this time it will be permanent and far-reaching. When Marks once start there may be no catching them. They are likely to increase in value two and even three dollars per thousand in as many hours.

It is for every interest of a Banking House to have its customers make money, and, with this in mind, we are placing as many German Marks as possible while we can obtain them for our clients around present prices. Upon settlement of the indemnity, which is imminent, Marks should soar, and the golden chance to buy will be lost.

Though we sell all kinds of Foreign Exchange, having Bank connections and maintaining substantial balances in all the great countries, we especially advocate buying German Marks, above all other moneys, to make big profits, and we are convinced purchases should be made at once, for delay may spell the loss of a Life's Opportunity.

We issue a descriptive circular for free distribution. Send for it! Read a few facts and decide for yourself if there can be the remotest possibility of making a mistake.

COLONIAL THEATRE
BOSTON, MASS.

Dear Boston Public:

The great audience at the Colonial Theatre last night will tell you that the Paramount picture "DECEPTION" is one of the mightiest ever filmed, and that few productions ever made approach it in elaborateness, no matter at what price tickets were sold.

We are offering you this expensive production at the prices of an ordinary motion picture show. In order to do this it is necessary to run continuously. If we gave only two performances a day of "DECEPTION" we should have to ask $4.00 a seat.

Instead we are going to give several performances during the day beginning at noon and running until eleven P. M.

The production at the Colonial will last two hours exactly and you may drop in any time and be sure of seeing the whole show.

The performances de luxe with the great orchestra will occur at two, four, seven and nine.

HUGO RIESENFELD

P. S. And remember, we will show this same production intact with orchestra, chorus and effects on Sundays from 3 to 11 P. M.

Star Bantamweights to Meet Here May 27 Under Fan- and A. C. Direction

Matchmaker Tom Goodwin of the Commonwealth A. A. is making a great attraction for Saturday night, when he signed Bobby Vaughn of New York to meet Dutch Brandt of Brooklyn in a twenty-round match. Both are of those tireless, two-fisted fighters, who always go the limit. Brandt has wins to his credit over Vincent Martin and others, but he is bigger and some of the other are featherweights.

"They Can't Rule You Off for Trying"

When times are good, or times are slack,
There's an old line saying around the track
It's under the head of a worldly crack,
"They can't rule you off for trying!"

Maybe you think of a splendid scheme,
That your friends all say is the ragiest dream—
But take up the fire and push on steam:
They can't rule you off for trying!"

Maybe a plan conceived in bliss,
That your friends all say is sure to miss—
But hustle along and remember this,
They can't rule you off for trying!"

Many a man is down on the ground
For reasons wrong, and reasons sound,
But never a law has yet been found
That can rule you off for trying

There's many a time you seem a bust,
You can't get dough, and you can't get trust—
But never forget down there in the dust:
They can't rule you off for trying!"

You paste this motto inside your hat,
And times when your schemes seem a little flat—
Take a peek at this, and remember that
They can't rule you off for trying!"

—Damon Runyon.

BRAVES BATTLE PHILS TODAY

Much-Defeated Boston Nationals Due to Start Winning Streak Soon

By NICK FLATLEY

Boston hoped a flock of fairies would, and welcomed the Braves back home. They have been executing prodigies in running away from baseball games, and in the matter of a clear afternoon in the matter to will make everybody forget all that.

What a team does in the first few weeks of a season doesn't make a great deal of difference, anyhow. Many a champion outfit has rocketed up from the May cellar to the topmost crest.

* * *

These Braves are far from being one of the best teams in the circuit, and by the same token, their hitting power makes them several steps removed from the worst outfit.

* * *

As you may have noticed, poor pitching has been responsible for more than seventy-five per cent of the Mitchell defeats thus far. The assault of the outfit has been timid and vigorous. But it is hard to win no matter how many runs you should get, if the other fellow gets twice as many.

The Tribe has several pitchers capable of going with the fastest company. It may be that the shift from the balmy breezes of Galveston to the chill spring of the north threw them out of condition. If that didn't something did.

But birds like McQuillan and Oeschger and Fillingim and Scott will get keep on losing regularly, at all, especially with a few base knocks back of them.

* * *

The Braves have a long stand at home, practically a month, and that period, in the presence of a populace more than willing to be won over, may change things somewhat.

* * *

Meantime the Red Sox go out into the West, after a visit to the lotus of the Mackerels. Duffy's club is still a matter of mystery—strong enough in the field to battle right through for the lead, but questionable in the pitching box.

A month in the West, where the temperature is much more elevated than hereabouts, will give the Sluggers a real chance, something they haven't had since leaving Hot Springs.

* * *

Those Yankees have sufficient brute force to inspire upon or near the .900 throughout, but they still

JOHNNY KILBANE'S CASE

Ruth and Kelly Both Fail to Star Carl Mays and Baseball Discipline

By JACK CONWAY

The Cleveland Boxing Commission took a wise and courageous and when it refused to approve a bout between Johnny Kilbane, world's featherweight champion, and Fred Jacks of England. The gentlemen in charge of the boxing game in Cleveland do not intend to have the sport injured by a first-class boxer meeting a very ordinary performer.

The commission went further and named five boxers whom it considers capable of giving Kilbane an even battle. It stated it would approve of a match between the champion and any of the men mentioned. With greedy boxers demanding big purses for meeting setups and inexperienced, get-rich-quick promoters eager to put on any kind of a match provided they believe it will draw a big gate, it is necessary that some sane body of men assert themselves and save the ring game.

Jimmy Dunn, who developed Kilbane until the latter became a champion, was in Boston with Carl Fremaine. Dunn is no longer manager of the featherweight champion. Jimmy stated that his break with Kilbane was due to politics. Kilbane, foolishly seeking political prestige, desired to prevent the present Governor of the State of Ohio from speaking at Dunn's boxing club after the latter had granted permission for the address. Dunn, very naturally, refused Kilbane's request. The title-holder then cast aside the man who was responsible for making a fortune for him. Such is the gratitude of fighters. You may wish to add that ring men are not the only ones who are ingrates.

* * *

It was an off day in baseball yesterday. Neither Babe Ruth of the Yankees nor George Kelly of the Yankees got a home run. Kelly will get more home runs before the 1921 campaign ends. Ruth will get many circuit smashes between now and October. You will not think a great deal about Kelly's total of home runs when you study Ruth's list of long drives some day after the baseball season has closed.

* * *

Nick Flatley, baseball editor of this newspaper, stated yesterday that the Yankees' defeat in Monday's game was partly due to the fact that have to attach a little finesse to rome under the wire ahead of Speaker's Indians.

* * *

Thirty-three runs for the Giants in its four games with the Braves tells the story of why Boston was swept off its feet in four games on the Polo Grounds. The Braves couldn't even make any of the games close and collected only eight runs in the entire series.

* * *

Babe Benton, the veteran left hander, stood the Braves on their heels in the final game. It was Ruhe's first 1921 appearance on the mound, and he made a good job of it. Boston nicked the burly Carolinian for only three hits, and in six of the nine innings they went out in order.

* * *

A tip on Boston's play was that the slow-moving Frank Snyder beat out a bunt in the eighth inning. Snyder was playing well back, and grabbed caught him completely off his guard.

Keith Kane, football captain-elect at Harvard, was elected vice-president of the Harvard Union, defeating Dick Higgins and Myles Baker, respectively, football and baseball managers.

SOPHOMORES NOSE OUT YEARLINGS AT TUFTS

The Tufts sophomores won the meet with the freshman, 39 points to 38, at Tufts Oval. Lawler scored two firsts for the victors.

BUSH ON MOUND FOR RED SOX

Duffy Clan Stops for Series in Slowtown Before Long Swing Through West

Philadelphia, May 4—Bullet Joe Bush was picked by Manager Duffy to face the Athletics today in the first game of a series the Red Sox play before making their initial Western trip. The Red Sox hurler, who has had a long rest, as he was suspended almost a week ago in Boston, when he got into an argument about a play at the plate with Umpire Wilson.

He has been working steadily, however, and is anxious to get back to regular work. According to members of the team, Bush looks just as good this Spring as he ever did, and is more confidence now than since he stamped his comeback.

The Red Sox cheated out of almost half their games by rain and cold in Boston, and were unable to get going to be headed toward the west, where they should have a chance to get accustomed to playing baseball every day.

The team has a lot of confidence figuring its infield the best in the league, and its pitching staff strong enough to keep right in the fight. The Macks won a game back in Boston when they staged a ninth inning rally after the Sox had apparently tucked the pastime away.

If in their other game they were badly beaten, the Boston outfit, like most other clubs, seemed to have the edge on the team that Mack says looks more promising than any club he has trained since he was winning pennants with his champions.

Tall Hryan Harris, who lost a close game in Boston, looked like the Mackmen's choice to start in the box.

The ultimate Yank tilt in Boston was a sad affair for the Sox who outbit the enemy, but couldn't emerge with a single run from a collection of ten base knocks. Only consolation was that Ruth was quelled completely, and made to look weak by the slim native southpaw.

THIRTY ROUNDS AT OPENER

Boston Arena A. C. to Stage Three Tens at Its First Show on May 12

The opening show of the Boston Arena A. C. will be held at the New Boston Arena on Friday evening, May 13. Three ten-round bouts have been arranged and an opening eight is in the making. The first ten will bring together Chief Ridley of California, featherweight champion of the Pacific Coast, and Danny Frush of Baltimore, one of the five featherweights of the United States selected by the Cleveland Boxing Association as a suitable opponent of Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion of the world.

The second ten has George Shade, Pacific Coast middleweight champion, meeting Joe Logan of Boston. Logan recently returned from the Pacific Coast, where he won seven out of eight fights.

The final ten will bring together two of the best lightweights in the country in Pete Hartley and Joe Benjamin.

HOBART LACROSSE TEAM WINS, 3 TO 1

Hobart College lacrosse team handily defeated Harvard on Soldiers' Field, 3 goals to 1. Kallioh was the star of the victor's offence.

MEMORIAL DAY RING BOUTS ARE BARRED

The Boxing Commission at its meeting today went on record as refusing all boxing permits on Memorial Day. The right to box on the old Huntington avenue ball grounds was also denied Baldwin club, the petition being opposed by the Y. M. C. A. authorities, who have a school building adjacent to the grounds. Magazine Beach was also put under a ban, as was all vacant lots adjoining any dwellings. Battling Kopen was suspended for three months by the commission for being out of condition for his bout at the Catley club.

AMERICANS WIN IN BRITISH TENNIS DOUBLES

London, May 4.—C. S. Cutting and R. N. Leonard of New York won their double match from the British opponents, H. R. Gebhard and E. Leatham, in the Inter-club championship tourney games being played at the Queen's club.

WATERTOWN PITCHER BLANKS ARLINGTON

Warren Shanahan, Watertown High pitcher shut Arlington out without a hit or run at the Spy Pond athletic field, Arlington. He also started the rally which led to Watertown's two runs and victory in the tenth inning.

The managers of the various postal district teams organized the Boston Postal League at a meeting held in the central postoffice. John J. Mahoney of the Boston Postal Annex was elected president and John D. Murphy of the North Postal station, secretary and treasurer.

JACK TWIN READY SOON TO MEET ALL COMERS

Frank Conway, Boston American.

Just a few lines to let you know that I have signed an agreement for my left hand, which will put me up for ten or twelve days. After that I will be ready to meet any of those young princes around here. It makes me laugh to hear some of these fight fans saying that the old Twin is afraid to meet this fellow or that fellow. If they will only take a chance at my past record, they will surely find out for themselves that I have fought them all, and just as I have left arm in left right, nothing would suit me better than a chance with Ted Jamieson, the Milwaukee light-heavyweight, who is now after meeting Wolf Larsen here in Boston.

I have had offers from Seattle, Wash., offering me $1,000 and railroad trip tickets to meet Willie in the public

Meehan there, and I had to cancel that also.

I wish you would state these facts

ABE FRIEDMAN AFTER BOUT WITH TREMAINE

Abe Friedman, the New England bantamweight champion, who put Pete Herman and Young Montreal, refuse to box, wants to box Carl Tremaine or any other bantamweight in the country. The Armory A. PRINCETON NINE KEEPS ON WINNING

Princeton, N. J., May 4.—Princeton's baseball team continued its winning streak here, beating Pennsylvania, 6 to 1, in a walking contest. The Tigers played like an many-hued leaguers in contrast. The Armory A. A., the Pastmel A. A., the Baldwin A. A. and the Arena A. CHAPTER VII—continued

"Well, then," he smiled. "I'll try very hard not to feel grateful. But you don't mind if I feel glad, do you? It's nice to me as if you were coming nearer, as if you'd made up your mind to live your life and not just exist. Even if you don't love me, you've got an awful lot to look forward to—to look back on, haven't we?"

She nodded, but did not answer.

"You don't really believe that I feel in love with Diana? You were only a little annoyed, do you?"

"Yes, Mr. Frank," she said quickly, "I know how long you've known her and how much she means to you."

It seems to me that it might to make life together easier for both of us if you would call me Frank. Life always goes pleasantly when you think that I know as much as I please and that you are considerate of my every whim. But you don't know how often and often I've given up things to please you and how I've tried to make you happy and good at school—I am and good at golf."

He knelt on the bed and took her in his arms. She turned her head against him. And it seemed for once as if she was glad to have his arms close and hot though he held her roughly. But she could not be quite sure, for the gladness was that of an animal, after which its mate is feeding, and disappointment has found a safe refuge.

"I love you, too," he said, trying to put better with us. You are going to be patient and kind, not by fits and starts, but all the time."

He felt her head move slightly. He drew back his head to look at her, and very swiftly she turned her face away. She had begun to cry. He clasped her more tightly.

"Oh, Diana, darling, what does it matter? Tell your best friend. Tell your friend where you loved you long and so faithfully. I know there's something. Please tell me! I'm not angry, I promise you. I'll try to draw back and rule to his feet. his heart numb with a sense of catastrophe.

"Just So Tired."

"Diana," he cried, "for heaven's sake tell me what is wrong! I know you too well to believe you when you say there is nothing. You shouldn't treat me as you've done this. . . . For God's sake, don't tell me what is wrong!"

"When you please, please leave me alone!" she said. "There's nothing wrong—nothing. I'm just tired—tired, and to tears, being made to cry.

"There is nothing wrong? Is there nothing wrong? Then why—why—why—" Frank's voice rose. "Why do you treat me like a stranger? Why do you hide everything from me? Why do you act as if I were your enemy instead of your husband? Why do you treat me as if I were not a gentleman?"

"Please, please, please go away! I'm not myself. I'm not responsible for anything I say or do. I'm not myself and almost hate you. And you're not a gentleman."

"Then, by God, I'll sleep as much as I ever have in the past!" Frank's voice was almost shrill. "And sleep alone!"

He got out of the room in her presence and closed the door after him.

He found his mother-in-law reading the evening papers in the library. She looked up at him with a faint mask, and merely that quick, natural and good-natured look of interest which she had given him when he entered the room. But she was easily and willingly misled by what he said.

"I'm really worried about Diana. She's not at all well. First she says that she's a returned that, after that she's going to be ill and then she's not going to be ill enough that she needs a doctor, and then, instead of going to bed, she goes out to dinner. I'm afraid she's overtired and run down."

"It's nothing quite serious," said Mrs. Langham. "They never seem to realize that they're not physically immortal. Diana, for one of her greatest, darlings. When a matter arises she gets quite tired and ill and she can't. But a woman can always cry. We like to cry. I think she probably made up her mind to turn over a new leaf; she knows that it is going to be very hard for her to do that, and so she cries.

"It doesn't matter a bit," said Mrs. Langham. "They never seem to realize that they're not physically immortal, and one of her greatest, darlings. When a matter arises she gets quite tired and ill and she can't. But a woman can always cry. We like to cry. I think she probably made up her mind to turn over a new leaf; she knows that it is going to be very hard for her to do that, and so she cries.

Heard Her Voice

"Excuse me," said Manners suddenly, "I thought I heard her voice."

He stepped into the hall and listened. He could hear her voice distinctly now, and it sounded cheerful. She was talking animatedly to someone on the telephone that stood at the foot of the stairs.

He ran quickly up the stairs, but by the time he had knocked on the door she had finished the call and had hung up the receiver. In her face there was no trace of recent tears. There was a flush on her cheeks, and her eyes looked very bright and shining.

"I heard your voice," said Manners, and came up to see if there was anything the matter."

"It was Ogden Penn," she said, "to ask how I felt. I saw him in town, and he said I looked so tired it worried him."

"His ingenuity seem to have had a good effect," said Manners, a little drily, "for you look quite like yourself again. Now do do that receiver off so nobody else can disturb you, and go to sleep."

The sharpness with which she obeyed pleased him. And he went downstairs with good hopes for the morrow. But it annoyed him to think that another man's solicitude should afford her more pleasure than his own had been unable to supply.

He thought that on the morrow she would be different, that she would refuse him nothing, that the happy thought upon which Manners fell asleep that night. And all the next morning it was never far from his mind, it was a rejuvenating thought, and brought him with a big spirit into whatever plans Tam had conceived for her with encouragement.

A Long Walk

Diana's long-hoped for reform was on way of being accomplished. The resolution seemed to have cost her dear, but not too dear to hold it. It was actually to go into effect. With Tam up to her ways and out of her room a month, talking during the morning, interrupting, but always upon some pleasant and tenable excuse, and Manners reading and scoring her note-writing, and her telephoning.

It seems to bear you say that you are going to be a real wife to me again, and that you are going to stay like this—Diana's arm and mine—instead of just yours.

What do you mean by being a real wife?"

"You know as well as I do."

That was an uncomfortable topic for Manners.

"You know, Diana, I really set store by that. I don't feel sure that you do feel about me as I do about you. I don't want me to have children. It's bad enough when both people love each other.

I don't see why you should be so cruel to me. Intelligent man has a deep of women who don't want children, sort of reputation and brings me up. . . . I don't want to be cruel to you, you don't love me. I feel sure that you don't love me. I feel sure that you don't love me. I feel sure that

Disarmament Would Be Wise Under Proper Conditions

Congress is now considering the question of international disarmament. It cannot be a difficult question. There cannot be any doubt of the wisdom, morality and popularity of disarmament under proper conditions. Just ordinary common sense is all that is needed to decide the question.

We cannot so disarm as to make ourselves defenceless. We cannot so disarm as to put ourselves at the mercy of any other nation. We cannot disarm in reliance upon the friendship and the protecting care of any other nation. We cannot place greater confidence in the employment of superior force by any other nation than that other nation is willing to place in us.

There is nothing more amusing and childlike than the argument of the British, and those in America who are more British than the British that we need not increase the size of our navy because we can depend upon the British Navy, and that we ought not to increase it because we would awaken thereby the suspicions and ill feeling of the people of Great Britain. Now, why should we awaken the suspicions and ill feelings of the people of Great Britain? We do not propose to increase our navy until it is SUPERIOR to the British Navy. We propose only to increase our navy until it is EQUAL to the power of the British Navy.

The British and the pro-British Americans say that the only object of such a big navy is protection against the British Navy. Very well, we can make the same reply. Why are the British worried about our intention to increase our navy?

If we reduce our naval building program it should be reduced in agreement with England only so that when Great Britain and America reaches the minimum neither will have a navy superior to the other. This is not a question of friendship; because it is merely a businesslike proposition, like asking your friend for a receipt when you pay him some money—merely business at which neither your friend nor Great Britain has a right to take offense.

As to the pacifists we have only this to say, that if they oppose the building of a navy as powerful as Great Britain's then they are hugging a mere term, an empty phrase, and not the reality of disarmament. The way to force this disarmament is to tell Great Britain that we intend to build a navy as big as her's if she does not reduce her navy to our size, and that we are willing to reduce the size of our navy when her navy is reduced to the size of our navy, and that we will reduce as fast as she is willing to reduce her navy, assuming all the time that the Japanese Navy is reduced likewise.

If we say this to Great Britain and mean it; that we do not intend to bluff about it, but really intend to build a navy which will be greater than Great Britain's, if she undertakes to build against us, then we shall have Great Britain knocking at our door and asking us for the love of heaven and of British humanity to stop it, for Great Britain cannot begin to build against us. Before we reach the limit of our national resources in building a navy Great Britain will have reached a limit which will not be one-quarter of our own. In other words, with the same effort we could build a navy four times as great as Great Britain's. She knows this perfectly well and would not for a moment undertake to build against us, if she thought we sincerely intended to go the distance unless she agreed to reduce her navy to the size of our own. This is pacifism's best bet, and those who won't see it are blind hypocrites and like to prate about something that they never want to realize.

Public Control of Private Corporations a Failure

Those who oppose public operation of our public service corporations like the railroads, street railways, gas and electric light companies always argue that public regulation of private management is the best method. They persistently ignore the fact that public regulation has failed from the beginning to regulate. And probably in sixty-nine out of seventy years of private management of the railroads the public regulating bodies have been controlled by the private management.

There is a very naive but interesting illustration of the point in Massachusetts. We have a solemn and dignified and rather expensive and, so far, a fair-minded Department of Public Utilities, which is supposed to regulate and control the public service corporations of Massachusetts in the interest of the people of the State. Petitions are solemnly filed before them praying for the reduction of charges or for other kinds of relief against the great creatures of the corporations. All the formalities of the court are invoked in practice in these proceedings before our Department of Public Utilities. They file in solemnity, in Indian file like a Supreme Court, and sit on a high bench with the clerk below like a Court of Appeals. But about there the similitude ends. Our public service corporations, the creatures who are supposed to be in their control, have not permitted them to have the power to summon the agents of these corporations before them as witnesses and to compel them to take oath that their statements will be true, and to suffer the pains and penalties of perjury if they are not true.

Now is this commission denied the power to summon the representatives of these public service creatures before it to tell the truth under the penalties for perjury, because it is the wise policy of the State to confine the power of summoning witnesses and administering oaths to our ancient and regularly constituted judicial tribunals? No. There is no such policy. What sort of a commission do you suppose enjoys the power of summoning witnesses and administering oaths? The gentleman who control the genteel boxing matches in Massachusetts. Now, although we cite this example as an instance of the absurd inconsistencies of our law we do not mean to imply that the Boxing Commission should not have the power of summoning witnesses and administering the oath. Any public body charged with a duty that requires them to obtain information should have the power to compel the disclosure of the truth. It is not that we would take away the right of our commissions to administer the oath, but that we would point out the utter farce of public regulation.

From every point of view, by every experiment and by all experience in the very nature of things and human character, private operation of public functions under public regulation is a farce and never can be anything else. It failed in the ancient world when the Romans undertook to farm out the collection of taxes to private syndicates, who abused their power so that the tax collector became the object of hatred throughout the ancient world.

It corrupted even the best men, and the tax collector was so despised, not because he collected the taxes, but because in the course of it he abused his power to get more than his commission, that the people began to suspect Christ when He was seen speaking to a tax collector and then considered that He had performed a miracle when He made the tax collector disgorge his unlawful ill-gotten gains. And it has made a ghastly and, to democracy, a dangerous failure in the modern world.

NELLIE BLY WRITES ABOUT DRUGS

Urges Passage of Law Making Penalty for Selling Opiates Imprisonment for Life. Pathetic Letter From Woman Victim.

By Nellie Bly

THE killing of people by drugs has become so widespread and of such a tragic proportions that unless the most drastic measures are taken immediately our nation is ruined.

The use of drugs is increasing. The laws which have been passed with the view of stopping the spread of this deadly disease are ineffective and futile.

To check the spread of this mortality fatal disease one must strike at the drug seller and peddler.

We must make and pass a law making the penalty imprisonment for life for those proved guilty of trafficking in opiates.

Then, and only then, will our nation be safe.

We must care for the poor wretches who are sick and suffering from this disease, a disease more fatal more horrifying and more appalling than cancer. Poor, forsaken souls! They are to be pitied from the depths of our hearts. For there is no disease known to mankind as cruel and horrible as the disease of drug-taking.

Letter of Woman Victim

And there must be some restraint put upon the medical profession to curb and limit, or even prohibit, the use of these deadly opiates. Better let the patient die of the disease he has than to cure him only to send him out into the world a drug addict. Substitutes can surely be found and invented. And if not, rather let the afflicted die of the ills they have than fill the world with helpless, erazed and suffering drug victims.

Read the letter below of a poor woman, refined, cultured, and a slave of horror. Only by the grace of God it might be you or me. Through no fault of her own this curse was put upon her. And no one was damned and ruined, so might you be, or I be, or the thousands of adults who must daily pass the door of physicians. The letter follows:

"Dear Nellie Bly—I feel that you will protect my name. I must earn a living, and could not if my name were known in connection with this curse. Every word I have written is true. Will you write something to help us? We are poor, cursed souls. There are, it is said, 25,000 decent drug addicts in New York city alone. We need help. I could tell you many more things about this dreadful addiction. No one can believe what we have suffered from people who do not know that drug addiction is absolutely a disease just as truly and more seriously than cancer has ever been.

"Some years ago while suffering from a severe illness I contracted the drug habit—morphine habit. No one in the whole world could have been more horrified and shocked than I was when I discovered that I was addicted to morphine. I am a widow with a little family to care for, and my illness compelled me to give up for days some work which meant the living for my family. I was anxious to get out of bed and not about my business for without work or pay no loved ones would suffer.

"When I was strong enough to go back to my work I continued the medicine given me to relieve pain. I tried to do without it occasionally a few times, but told myself the reason for my failure was not being able to stop if entirely. I was determined I was still working and dreaming for a moment that it was the victim of an incurable habit.

"The horror of it all dawned upon me one week-end when I had left that I must cease taking the medicine as I needed it no longer, and the expense was more than I could stand. I went to my home without my medicine. I was far away from where I procured it. And what was my great surprise to find that I was stricken almost helpless and suffering the tortures of hell, or worse, really, for want of my medicine. I could not believe it—that it, the strong-willed mother at other people's habits was myself the victim of a habit. What I suffered from my awakening to this horror I never can tell you, or how I lived through the week and until I could get to the source of my supply and fall in the door of the drug store in a state of collapse more dead than alive from the terrible deprivation of my usual dose of medicine. God alone knows what I suffered in my mind from the knowledge that I was a drug addict.

"I went to the physician who had prescribed it and on my knees begged him to cure me. He hesitatingly told me that no cure had ever been found for morphine addiction, but that the only thing he could do was to help me along as he was apparently normal supplying my needs physically for the drug.

"I would not believe it. I was desperate. I determined to find a cure. I waited until my vacation, telling in the meantime just a little of the drug as would keep me mentally and physically half-way normal. Without it I could do no work, was a nervous, shaking wreck that could not appear even decently before my employer and business companions.

"While my family attributed my condition to overwork and nervous breakdown, I was glad the ruse had enabled me from its becoming known to those who knew the terrible secret I had to hide. I want to say here that I know that my addiction up to that time had never been known to any one. I was then a respected member of society, holding a position of responsibility and of unusual trust, doing my daily duties mutually and conscientiously and efficiently, and honored and respected by my employers and fellow workers. I had never lost an hour's work through my drug habit except at the time I endeavored to break myself of the habit alone and without help. And I am taking the minimum dose that will sustain me, I am apparently a normal person. But without it I am a wreck. Nevertheless, after my futile attempt to break the habit, I still felt that some way must be found to help me.

Tortured in "Cure"

"I finally found what was said to be a 'perfect cure' in two weeks. Again I waited for my Summer vacation; told my family that I was going to Chicago to visit, and entered a 'drug cure sanitarium' in New York city.

"I can never tell you the hell of horrors that I went through the two weeks I was taken into a room and divested of every article of clothing, to prevent my having the drug secreted on my person; then moved to another room in a new set of their clothing, and put on the rack. I was douched with cold water, then with hot water, and endured electric treatments, including private that nearly tore my quivering body into shreds.

"No Christian martyr ever went into the arena by the pagans, to be torn and mutilated and killed and mangled by the lions, ever suffered the agony I suffered in enduring this cure. I, too, was mangled and tortured, but without death ending my sufferings. Always at the moment when strength could not stand any more or I became unconscious I was dragged out and released, waiting for sufficient strength and consciousness to return so I could be put through the terrible torture again.

"Finally, I could not stand alone."

To Be Continued.

LEARN HOW TO REST

Perhaps the reason you are so run down and tired all the time is because you do not know how to relax when you have the opportunity.

The human machine cannot run successfully under constant strain.

If the line of recreation you follow after your day's work is something which you do under pressure and excitement you are not giving your nervous system even.

When you reach home at night and have had your dinner you feel uneasy unless there is something to keep you going at high speed, or you read so rapidly that it is a strain on your mental apparatus and again you gain no rest.

If after dinner you hurry to do this or that, or if you hurry to go here or there, you are allowing your day time occupation to pull on your vitality and nervous energy.

When the pressure of daily work is over you should be able to loosen up and relax in a comfortable position and be at ease with yourself and the world.

Learn to be comfortable and easy and contented about your home and in what you do by way of entertainment.

MOTHERS OF TODAY AND OF LONG AGO

By Beatrice Fairfax

NOWADAYS were always read or hear about the neglectful mother. We hear a lot about the mothers of yesterday who toiled and spun and managed the household and brought up the children and lived simple retired and restful lives. And then were referred to and contrast in deadly terms of the mother of today, gadding about in motor cars, in quest of pleasure, and leaving the children to the care of nurses.

POWER OF VISION IN MEN AND BEASTS

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Is the decrease in the power of vision proportional to the increase of the size of animals?" asks R. H.

No. Other things being equal, the larger the eye the greater the power of vision should be. That is why the owls have a reputation because the larger the glass the more light it collects in the images at the focus. The visual powers of the lower animals vary not so much with the size of their eyes as with their structure, and with the habits and training of the animals themselves.

Intelligence and application have an enormous influence over the senses of vision. A new trained might develop the faculties of many people to an actual or in many cases of such an over own inability. It is true that those do not see because they have active but things but indirect ears really not seen.

Sometimes, however, such things make a subconscious impression, which remains in the brain like an undeveloped photographic image. Then they may suddenly flash out in the memory when stimulated by association.

People who are addicted to the use of telescopes and microscopes often exhibit an inability to see things that are perfectly visible to the naked eye, because the difference is not the optical mechanism, but in the degree of training that the unaccustomed eye has given to the power of vision. Persons who are near sighted and shade their eyes to see distant objects, persons who have perceive definite features in a distant landscape, which those who are not acquired the habit of the other or the sense of focussing attention upon it.

Animal Vision

There are similar differences among the lower animals; some species have eyes that see well here or there, or their food is by discovering, cannot to be seen at all, or anything at a little distance, while others, like hawks and shrike birds of prey, perceive small moving objects at great distances.

It is noteworthy that many game animals are not alarmed by the sight of a man, so long as he is quite near, although it is certain that his image is impressed upon their retinas; but they take to their heels and run like the wind if they catch his scent, however far he may be.

Stars and Stripes

The man who never changes his mind usually fails to fertilize the little he has.

Excuses are the pettifogging lawyers that lurk in the mind, ever ready to defend for a small fee paid out of our conscience.

To the Editor

Editor Boston American:

The following conversation occurred here on Tuesday, when the day when a group of men were discussing the United States naval construction program:

An Englishman remarked, somewhat patronizingly, "Why build a navy here? If anything comes up Great Britain, with her navy, will see that Uncle Sam is taken care of."

An Irishman broke in at this point with a show of alarm, "At what port," he inquired, "would they land the Irish and Jews?"
